

City of Toronto

Toronto, ON

Mayor Olivia Chow

Pledge Summary

The City of Toronto works to protect and restore pollinator populations and biodiversity across the city through a range of programs, policies, and community partnerships. Central to these efforts is the Pollinator Protection Strategy, which guides habitat creation, stewardship, and public engagement to support healthy ecosystems and climate resilience. The PollinateTO Grants program is a key component of this strategy, directly supporting community-led projects that plant native species, enhance greenspaces, and foster hands-on stewardship. Through PollinateTO, the City not only safeguards wild pollinators and increases local biodiversity, but also advances broader priorities for sustainable, resilient communities and supports the implementation of the TransformTO Net Zero Strategy and the Biodiversity Strategy.
